

COMMUNITY CANNING IN THIS COUNTY

Ranchos de Atrisco Club Plans Cooperative Kitchen

One of the first community canning kitchens in New Mexico will be established in the five community of Ranchos de Atrisco and Albuquerque. Through the efforts of Mrs. Ida B. French, the county home demonstration agent, and the housekeepers club of Atrisco the plan is being pushed to realization.

Community canning kitchens are no longer in the experimental stage, nor are they established and highly regarded institutions in many localities which have had due wisdom and foresight to erect them.

Private organizations have the urge to build canning units, the fullest bearing right when the season is hottest and the housewife busiest.

The added task of putting up the winter's supply of fruits and vegetables seems often "the last straw" to the already overburdened woman. Yet there is much more fruit ripening in the garden than can possibly be used while it is fresh. So she goes out her cans.

Most women freely admit that canning is not particularly hard work if the difficulty is to make it sandwiched in between numerous regular tasks.

A community canning kitchen, either of the type to which members may bring their products to be canned at a fixed price per can or that in which members work in groups on special days with the help of modern large-scale equipment, saves garden products which would otherwise waste because the housewives of the locality have not time or strength to can them.

The working capital which will be necessary at the outset for the purchase of the equipment will be raised by the members of the community who have already planned a bazaar for the dual purpose of raising money and taking over the proposed canning.

The Ranchos de Atrisco communities is one of the most enterprising and progressive in the country. It has a pleasant social life and is always ready to support any new movement, notably a hamper farm 1920. Even the overflow of the Rio Grande in that vicinity is able to dampen their enthusiasm.

Why Not Fair Pay For Ministers?

Not less than 1,000 ministers in a thousand receive less than $1,000 a year. The average salary below $1,000 is less than $700.

Because of low salaries only 30,000 ministers are serving the 150,000 rural churches of the United States.

In one denomination, because of poor salaries, all per cent. of the congregations are without regular ministers. Another denomination reports a need of a thousand ministers to fill gaps.

The American Protestant Church owns property valued at over $250,000,000—an average for each minister in its employ of $12,000—yet the average salary is less than $700 a year.
